

... palette of windows that were inserted only a decade later. This pattern of colouring was common in the products from the London studio of Heaton, Butler & Bayne in this decade, although there is no documentary evidence to support the claim that they were the designers and manufacturers of the window.